Experience

Patrick Oxford is the Chairman and former Managing Partner of Bracewell & Giuliani. Mr. Oxford has overseen Bracewell's expansion into New York and Dubai and the firm's growth into one of the country's preeminent law firms. Before assuming the role of Managing Partner and to a limited extent thereafter, Mr. Oxford's practice focused on business transactions related to energy, real estate and finance.

For many years, Mr. Oxford has been deeply involved in the business and civic affairs of Houston and the State of Texas. He was appointed by then-Governor George W. Bush to the Board of Regents of the University of Texas System, a nine member board which oversees the 15 institutions of the UT System and its $9 billion annual budget as well as the University of Texas Investment Management Company and its $16 billion in assets. While a member of the Board of Regents, Mr. Oxford was chairman of its committee on health affairs, overseeing the six health institutions which are part of the UT System.
