

POWER

Our firm has counseled the power industry for more than 25 years. Whether the need is project development, trading, transmission, or permit-related, we help clients maximize their commercial opportunities and returns within the regulatory parameters that define electric power and utility operation.

Bracewell advises investor-owned utilities, cooperative and municipal utilities, developers of competitive generation (including cogeneration and small power production) and merchant transmission, power marketers and brokers. We are key players representing private equity investors in power generation facility acquisitions and divestitures. A particular strength is our work on structured commodity transactions that involve the formation, purchase and sale of gas and power trading positions, companies, electricity derivatives and other energy futures strategies.

We help power generation and transmission clients achieve competitive advantage in the deregulated
