

PRODUCTS LIABILITY

Bracewell represents clients in product-liability cases ranging from large multiparty and multi-county litigation to single person injury tort claims. We serve as regional counsel for manufacturers or insurers in connection with product liability mass tort claims that involve:

- Chemical toxic exposure allegations involving substances such as asbestos, benzene, latex, lead, manganese and silica
- Medical devices, including orthopedic devices to hospital equipment, as well as pharmaceuticals and breast implants
- Consumer products such as recreational and outdoor power equipment
- Industrial products and processes involving the energy, construction and building industries.

Our lawyers are skilled investigators, with the technical knowledge and operational insight that product liability litigation requires. We work closely with clients in advance of litigation to understand the products, issues and key in-house witnesses. For c