

ENVIRONMENTAL STRATEGIES

Clients rely on Bracewell & Giuliani's environmental practitioners to help them achieve their business objectives in circumstances deeply impacted by pervasive and complex environmental issues, laws and regulations. Our practice focuses on our clients' defining issues such as climate change, air quality, national energy policy and industrial project development. We help our clients to identify, assess and effectively manage material environmental issues, liabilities and obligations. In addition, we provide sophisticated environmental counseling, litigation, and enforcement defense across all major environmental issues and statutes.

Our Environmental Strategies group includes senior members of our firm with top-level environmental experience gained in private practice and in senior government positions. The group is organized and staffed to provide Board-level advice to global business enterprises whose objectives require a multi-disciplinary
